Common Causes of Accidents in the WORKPLACE

There are a variety of accident causes in the workplace, many of which are easily preventable by proper order and conduct. Accidents occurring at work are often due to one of the following:

1

Overexertion - this occurs when a staff or worker's responsibilities include physical labor, and they work long days or nights without much time for breaks.

2

Slip and falls - A slip and fall is the result of a worker losing his or her balance on an unreliable surface, such as a wet floor.

3

Workers being struck, squeezed, or crushed by machinery or equipment - This type of injury occurs when machinery or equipment malfunctions during employee use.

4

Another common type of workplace accident are those involving vehicles.
