Practical Strategies for Effective Communication

Speaker: Richard Hawk

Our webinar speaker Richard Hawk has spoken to and worked with a wide variety of industries including oil and gas, energy utilities, medical, production, military and mining. He is a popular international speaker and trainer including being a keynote speaker three years in a row at the largest safety convention in the world sponsored by the National Safety Council. Hawk has also been a featured speaker at NASA.

Richard has written several articles and books including The Safety Leaders Guidebook and has his own monthly column in Safety & Health Magazine that helps safety leaders stay inspired. Now in its 18th year his “Safety Stuff” e-zine is a clearing house of ideas for thousands of safety leaders around the world.

Hawk is an accomplished musician, actor and avid pool player who lives with and obeys his wife of 40 years Jackie in Southern New Jersey.
During this webinar Richard is going to share Practical Tips and techniques that will help you communicate more effectively. Plus, it’ll be fun!

Richard spent more than 15 years working in the safety industry – first as a safety engineer for a nuclear power plant and then as a safety consultant for a wide variety of industries – before becoming a keynote speaker. Richard’s depth of knowledge and experience make for content-rich sessions. And his energetic speaking style makes his presentations upbeat and exciting for attendees.

Richard Hawk helps companies around the world create more vibrant safety cultures by showing them how to make safety fun. As a professional speaker, author and musician, he also inspires employees to focus better and enlightens safety leaders about ways to increase their influence.
